

The Book of Job

Where Ethics & Aesthetics Clash

Presented by Michael Kolarcik, SJ

Third Saturdays, September to March
(excluding Dec.) | 10:00 AM to 12:00 PM
Livestream & recording

“Up till now I have known you by the hearing of the ear, and now my eye sees you” — Job 42:5

The Book of Job belongs to the third section of the TaNaK תנ"ך, the writings of the Old Testament. It is a challenging book from the point of view of ethics and spirituality. Why, because we see here a righteous person who having been blessed by God sees everything precious in his life taken away. And the question is, can this man still praise God for the gifts he has received and lost? It is a question each and everyone of us will face in our lives. And so the response of Job in this book is one we need to grapple with.

Michael Kolarcik, SJ, is an Associate Professor of Old Testament studies at Regis College and serves as Rector of the Regis Jesuit Community. He was appointed Rector of the Pontifical Biblical Institute by Pope Francis from 2014-2023.

Registration: $160
